

Anjali Reddy

From: Anjali Reddy [areddy@clsdc.com]
Sent: Friday, October 14, 2011 4:40 PM
To: Kenya
Subject: Kenya developers are creating innovative mobile applications.

Click to view onl

2011 OCT 18 PM 1:45

- Simba Technologies has created an app called MedKenya, which delivers health information to Kenyans via mobile phone. The company plans to launch an expanded version, called MedAfrica, to bring similar content to other countries on the continent.
- Since 2007, Kenyans have used the mobile banking platform M-Pesa to transfer funds via text messaging. ("M" stands for mobile and "pesa" is Swahili for money).
- In partnership with the World Bank and Nokia, Kenya recently created an "m-lab" to incubate more mobile application startups. According to Dr. Bitange Ndemo, the country's permanent secretary of the Ministry of Information and Communications, thousands of young Kenyans are involved in app development.

Source: Mercury News

To learn more about Kenya
visit www.kenya.info

This email was sent to kenya@clsdc.com. If you are no longer interested you can unsubscribe instantly.

2011 OCT 18 PM 1:45